Therapy Centre

Sports Massage Therapy

Solarium

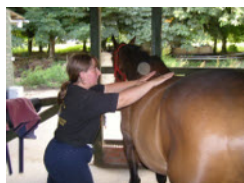

Magnotherapy

Sports Massage Therapy

Sports Massage Therapy techniques have kept pace with the changing methods of training, playing a very important role in prevention therapy and in recovery from injury as well entailing deeper and better communication, these techniques have lead to a much richer relationship with the horse.

Benefits:

- ✧ It manipulates the soft tissues in the body to achieve specific goals of drainage, relaxation or stimulation and releasing muscle-related problems
- ✧ It contributes to the overall economy of the body and promoting a good supply of nutrients to the muscle groups
- ✧ Its healing function has been known to speed up recovery from injury
- ✧ It increases emotional bonding with the horse especially in the young - which learns to relax and accept being touched and handled
- ✧ It can aid the improvement in horses that show signs of "Touch shyness" which in the domesticated horse gives an indication of problems or a phobia
- ✧ Massage is also a diagnostic tool, as it is possible to feel and detect much sooner than by sight any abnormalities and problems. Massage can help to avoid possible complications that could be very costly to treat
- ✧ And more...

Solarium

Horse solariums, as they are known as, use a combination of ultraviolet and infra-red light (IR), the ultraviolet (UV) light being particularly beneficial for stable-kept horses.

The regular use of an equine solarium has the following benefits:

- ☼ Improves blood circulation and cellular metabolism
- ☼ Improves muscle elasticity in advance of intensive work, thereby reducing the risk of sustaining injury
- ☼ Helps reduce stiffness after work, promotes relaxation and recovery
- ☼ Assists in the relief of pain after injury particularly back pain
- ☼ Improves general health, condition and well being of the horse/pony
- ☼ Helps dry-off a horse/pony after exercise or wash-down

The therapeutic benefits of radiant heat and sunlight (or artificial sunlight provided by UV light) are well documented in authoritative books on equine injury and therapy. Heat, being a form of energy increases metabolic activity in the cells. This increased activity causes an increase in oxygen demand locally. As a result, capillary dilation occurs to increase the amount of blood that brings oxygen and nutrients to the area. Membrane diffusion and enzymatic activity also increase enabling oxygen consumption and waste removal.

Magnotherapy

The therapeutic purpose of magnetic fields that come from static magnets and electrically generated pulsed magnetic fields; however it is the characteristics of the magnetic field rather than the actual magnet strength that seems to be the important factor. The change in the polarity of the field then changes in the way the cells operate. Structures in the cells detect the presence of a magnetic field, and processes such as proteins, hormones or enzyme synthesis are then affected.

Benefits:

- * Improves blood circulation
- * Improves the metabolism
- * Assists and speeds the natural healing process
- * Reduces inflammation
- * Assists in the removal of metabolic waste
- * Increases oxygen uptake

We have a selection of magnotherapy products such as rugs and boots for horses, collars and beds for dogs and some products for humans.
